 O-2A US Navy Service

The O-2 was a military version of the Cessna Model 337 Super Skymaster. Two series were produced: the O-2A and the O-2B. The O-2A was equipped with wing pylons to carry rockets, flares, and other light ordnance. In the FAC role the O-2A was used for identifying and marking enemy targets with smoke rockets, coordinating air strikes and reporting target damage. During the Vietnam War, the O-2A was introduced as a replacement for the O-1 Bird Dog, in the forward air control (FAC).

The Laffly V15T was a French light 4WD artillery tractor used during World War II. The main operator of Laffly V15T was the cavalry, for which light crawler tractors Renault UE were not mobile enough. In late 1938 Laffly received an order for 100 trucks V15T, but factory, overloaded with orders, was able to produce only 80 cars, and 20 more in 1940, after which the production stopped. At the beginning of production, it became clear that Laffly wouldn't cope with the order and it was passed to La Licorne, car factory in Courbevoie.

Like other models made by Laffly company, V15T has different nontrivial chassis. Also the machine was equipped with Laffly's calling card-erratic small wheels at the bow and under the floor, which improved throughput.

The official decision on the evacuation of the city of Pripyat is made by the government commission on April 27 at 5 pm. However, some elderly people did not want to leave their homes and began to hide from the police. Police officers introduced them only a few days later, when they were engaged in connecting the empty houses to the security alarm system.

The radiation situation has worsened. Therefore, the government commission decided to evacuate all people from the 10-kilometer zone around the Chernobyl nuclear power plant, and then from the 30-kilometer zone.
